1934: National Firearms Act Brings About First Major Gun Control The first major effort to eliminate private ownership of firearms came with the National Firearms Act of 1934 (NFA). A direct response to the rise of gangster violence in general and the St. Valentine's Day massacre in particular, the NFA sought to circumvent the Second Amendment by controlling firearms through a tax excise—$200 for each gun sale.

The history of gun rights speaks differently to different people - there is not one historical narrative of gun rights, but many. But it's a fact that the Founding Fathers' conception of the Second Amendment had little to do with a right to own, maintain, and use firearms for hunting, shooting, and self-defense.
